Singapore Cooperation Programme

Singapore has provided technical assistance to other developing countries since the 1960s. As a country whose only resource is its people, Singapore believes that human resource development is vital for economic and social progress. Singapore itself has benefited from training provided by other countries and international organisations.

In 1992, the Singapore Cooperation Programme (SCP) was established to bring together under one framework the various technical assistance programmes offered by Singapore. Through the SCP, the range and number of training programmes were increased to share Singapore's development experience with other developing countries. To date, Singapore has sponsored training courses and study visits for over 90,000 officials from more than 170 countries. The SCP is managed by the Technical Cooperation Directorate of the Singapore Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Singapore Judicial College

The Singapore Judicial College ('SJC') is an institution dedicated to the training and development of Judges and Judicial Officers. The College consists of a local and an international wing. Officially launched by Chief Justice Sundaresh Menon on 5 January 2015, the SJC is established under the auspices of the Supreme Court of Singapore.

Above all, the College aspires to be a centre of excellence through thought leadership and scholarship in the area of judicial training and development. The SJC will additionally serve as a "research and development laboratory" for judicial studies and methodologies. Further, the SJC will make available consultancy services, technical assistance and customised capacity building programmes which are tailored to the needs of the partner country.
