Singapore Cooperation Programme

Singapore has provided technical assistance to other developing countries since the 1960s. As a country whose only resource is its people, Singapore believes that human resource development is vital for economic and social progress. Singapore itself has benefited from training provided by other countries and international organisations.

In 1992, the Singapore Cooperation Programme (SCP) was established to bring together under one framework the various technical assistance programmes offered by Singapore. Through the SCP, the range and number of training programmes were increased to share Singapore's development experience with other developing countries.

To date, Singapore has sponsored training courses and study visits for over 100,000 officials from more than 170 countries. The SCP is managed by the Technical Cooperation Directorate of the Singapore Ministry of Foreign Affairs

National Institute of Education

The National Institute of Education (NIE) is the national teacher education institute in Singapore, providing teacher training, in-service development, and school leadership education and development. Through the years, NIE has positioned itself as a bed-rock of education in Singapore and built a unique brand name in teacher education internationally. Coupled with its extensive educational research activities, NIE has contributed significantly to Singapore's position as the regional education hub.

NIE has also been widely engaged for developing and conducting educators training programmes and project planning by both local and international clients, including the United Arab Emirates, Vietnam, Thailand, China and Indonesia. It also has extensive international experience in education consulting spearheaded by its consultancy arm, NIE International.
