About the Malaysian Technical Cooperation Programme (MTCP)

The Malaysian Technical Cooperation Programme (MTCP) was initiated at the 1st Commonwealth Heads of Government Regional Meeting (CHOGRM) for Asia Pacific Region held in Sydney on February 1978. It was officially launched on 7th September 1980 at the 2nd CHOGRM in New Delhi, India, to signify Malaysia's commitment to South-South Cooperation, in particular Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries (TDC).

The MTCP emphasises the development of human resources through the provision of training in various areas which is essential for a country's development. These areas include public administration, good governance, health services, education, sustainable development, agriculture, trade and investment, ICT and banking. As of 31st December 2019, 34,415 participants from 144 recipient countries have benefited from the various programmes offered under the MTCP.

Responsible Tourism (RT) is a new term being widely used nowadays as one of the ways to symbolise a more balanced approach towards better destination management. It shares the same objectives with 'Sustainable Tourism (ST)', which aims to foster positive economic, social and environmental impact on host destinations. Both RT and ST are alternative forms of tourism that aim to minimise the negative effects of tourism, but they are not interchangeable terms. Dr. Harold Goodwin, a renowned Professor of Responsible Tourism Management, clearly explains, "Sustainability is the goal, a goal which can only be achieved by people taking responsibility together to achieve it".

Responsible tourism is about using tourism to make better places for people to live in and better places for people to visit, in that order. It is different from Sustainable Tourism in that it focuses on what people, businesses and governments do to maximise the positive economic, social and environmental impacts to tourism. It is about identifying the important issues locally and addressing those, clearly reporting progress towards using tourism for sustainable development.

It is therefore crucial for any country or destination that are dependent on tourism as one of the main contributing sectors in its economy to pay attention to this trending tourism alternative. This is because RT encourages people to make positive contributions to the conservation of cultural and natural heritage which in return would help to provide better experiences for tourists through more meaningful connections with local communities. RT also emphasises the needs and requirements for physically challenged individuals. RT promotes culturally sensitive tourists and hosts, encourage respects, and build local pride and confidence. The training programme will take the participants to the state of Melaka and Malaysia's capital city, Kuala Lumpur for an enhanced experience on responsible tourism initiatives and impacts implemented in the country. It will also enable the participants to have an interactive sharing session with the local communities as well as better understand the implementation of responsible tourism in the country.

Course Objectives

- To study the concepts of responsible tourism and sustainable tourism through theoretical approach and practical exposure as well as discuss the impacts and challenges;
- To create a platform for interactive sharing session among the participants particularly on the needs and requirements of implementing and encouraging responsible tourism; and;
